RAILROAD ACCIDENT IN

East Bound Express Car Catches Fire—Presidential Pap—

Jan 9—And a terrible accident occurred this morning at Kalama, on the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company's road. The yard men were at work switching some cars when they noticed that the trucks on the rear end of one of the cars were on fire. They uncoupled the car from the train and ran it down the track a number of rods, when it became unmanageable. The yard men then left it, and soon the whole car was in flames. Before the fire department could get to the scene the car was entirely consumed. The express car was also burned, and the passenger coach was badly damaged. The express car was in charge of Messrs. Bell and Hall, who had a narrow escape from being burned to death. They were asleep in the car when the accident occurred, and were awakened by the heat and flames. They succeeded in getting out of the car before it was entirely consumed. The passengers were all asleep in the coach when the accident occurred, and were awakened by the shock. They all escaped without injury. The express car contained a large amount of valuable freight, which was entirely consumed. The loss will be heavy. The accident was caused by a hot box.

INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT EXTERNAL COMMERCE.

Undoubtedly Mr. Cox of New York was right when he said a day or two since in the debate in the house on the bill to modify the navigation laws that the industry most in contribution to civilization by commerce was slavery meaning thereby deliverance of commerce from burdensome laws. But this is not the whole case with our shipping interests. It is true, indeed, that our shipping cannot be revivified without this liberty. But with it we should not reach at once a position which would enable us to compete with other nations on the ocean. The reason is that our people find more profit in the vast field of industry opened within their own continental domain. The vitality of British and Norwegian shipping is the result of necessity. So crowded are all branches of industry in Great Britain that the hard life of the seafarer is accepted with its small margin of profit in preference to even less remunerative employment on land. In Norway the rocks and climatic circumstances the operations of the farmer and the blank necessity of labor for subsistence, drives most of the able-bodied men to a seafaring life. Capital finds no opportunity for investment at home, and so takes to external commerce as its only resource. In the United States the conditions are all widely different. The country is large, and vast portions of it are yet unoccupied. It has mines and forests and lands to invite the attention of labor and capital, and few men are disposed to turn away from these advantages to accept the hard life and small pay which fall to the sailor's lot. Not until our country shall become densely populated will these attractions become sufficiently counterbalanced to induce a great industry in this country to appear. The jute manufacturers of Dundee have made but little more than expenses for several years past, and their eyes have been turned toward the great grain growing regions of America. Already a large enterprise has been inaugurated in Minneapolis by some parties from Dundee, and a gentleman from the same city will be in Portland within a few weeks with the intention of inducing, in a similar project in this city or vicinity.

The sources from which jute is mainly derived is the region known as the presidency of Bengal, India, where it is grown almost exclusively within an area of 300 miles north and 200 miles west from Calcutta. It is sown from the middle of March to the end of April, and is ready for cutting about the beginning of August. 1000 pounds per acre being considered a fair crop. After being cleaned and prepared for export the jute is firmly packed in hydraulic presses in bales of 400 pounds each and shipped from the ports of Calcutta and Chittagong to all parts of the world where jute manufactories exist.

The proximity of the great grain growing regions of the Pacific coast to this jute growing district has already attracted the attention of the Dundee manufacturers, and the prevailing dissatisfaction with the present condition of the business in that city will doubtless have the effect of turning some of them in this direction. Over $1,000 hands are employed in the one industry in Dundee, and inasmuch as that city and vicinity have already sent to Oregon a number of capitalists and manufacturers, it is fair to presume that the mission of the gentlemen now on the way here will not fail to result in a considerable extension of our industrial development.

The international anti-vaccination congress is to be held in Berlin this month. Letters have been sent to the medical profession throughout the world requesting the co-operation of the members. The main object of the congress is to oppose compulsory vaccination on the ground, first, that Gessner on has failed either to prevent or mitigate small-pox," and second that it is "an organ zed system of blood-poisoning." The common tree of the international league for obtaining the abolition of compulsory vaccination is composed of physicians in all parts of the world, many of them of high celebrity. Their claim that vaccination is productive of many diseases, the result of introducing poisons in to the blood, is pretty certainly well founded. But with the experience the world has had with vaccination as a means of arresting small pox, it is not prepared to accept the statement that "Gessnerism is a failure" in this aspect. There may, however, be room for discussion as to whether the ills resulting from vaccination are not equal to the good it does; but this is quite another question.

Graders on the Oregon Short Line, coming west, are working through the Boise valley. The line passes eighteen miles southwest of Boise City. That town desires intercession with the company so that the line may be changed to pass through it, or so that at least it may get a branch road. Very probably it will secure the latter.

The amount of money for improvement of our rivers and harbors asked for by the bill introduced on Monday by Mr. George is $1,461,000. It is a pretty sum, but we are obliged to ask if we would receive. It may be feared, however, that congress will not for a long time be in the mood to grant us so generous a sum.

SUICIDES IN DIPLOMATIC LIFE.

The suicide of Count von Wimpffen at Paris, on the sixteenth before New Year's day, was a shocking occurrence not only from the act itself but from the surrounding circumstances. He was the minister plenipotentiary of the Austro-Hungarian empire and had just engaged in the negotiation of a new loan for the temporary use of the embassy at the world's gay capital. It is on accounts that can be gathered it is clear that he had parted but a few hours previously with his wife to whom he was devotedly attached. The cause of his untimely act is said to have been entirely little an insurmountable growing out of the fascinations of the new citizen of the diplomatic corps.

This sudden cause recalls to recall the tragical death of Monsieur Prevost Paradol, which occurred on the 20th July, 1870, at Washington where he had been just established as minister to the United States under the already waning empire of Emperor Napoleon. Monsieur Prevost, who a great literary star presaging the greatest, that France ever saw. He compared with Lamartine Guizot and Henry J. Raymond did with Horace Greeley. The well-executed picture opher was the deeper the fate of the two, but the wary little fellow who ended the Daily Times over the world of journalism was by far the more versatile writer and the more general newspaper man. Still was not strange that he emperor should cast upon this bright and dashing writer an honor never before conferred upon an editor, and more especially on her a monarchy, that of representing his country at the head of the diplomatic corps in America.

The new minister had hardly been received and recognized by President Grant, ere the cruel and cowardly assassination of Victor Noir by Prince Pierre Bonaparte was flashed under the cable to shock the feelings of French residents in America. Prevost Paradol knew Victor Noir well, and had every feeling in common with him. Hence he deplored his cruel and untimely death, but he knew that it would be fatal to his prospects to exhibit sympathy for the fallen man in any way. The French residents of America all condemned it as a coward's crime; but in the Tuileries sat the man of Sedfurino, watching the actions of all his envoys abroad. To have gone with the masses of the French people, as his heart would have led him, would have been to incur a recall to France in utter disgrace. He smothered his sympathy and waited for a worse grief.

The cry of "On to Berlin" was already ringing in the Place Vendome and the Porte St. Martin as the murdered journalist was borne to Pere la Chaise. A few weeks more and then came in rapid succession the frightful disasters of Worth, Cravelotte, Thionville and Sterbrucken. The eye of the watchful editor could see further than that of the emperor into the misfortune that was grinding the empire into dust. It was not merely the prowess of German cohorts led on by the grim old Manicuffel and the deeply scarred Von Moltke, that was wrecking France. It was the gang of sycophants surrounding the emperor and plundering, at every turn, the most frugal and industrious nation of earth. The observant glance of the journalist saw a gang of thieving contractors rolling in gilded chariots through the Rue de rivoli, while the gallant defenders of the trenches were going shoeless, and eating what was unfit food for the carrion crow, that gorged upon the harvest of the leaden rain.

All this drove the great editor into a frenzy. He could see nothing but the destruction of the empire. The formation of a successful republic upon its ruins was too far off even for his prescience. Reflection brought no calmness to his fevered brain and at length, welcoming death as a surcease to thoughts that were agonizing, he grasped his pistol and sent the bullet through his brain.

In looking over these two suicides, comparatively we find but little that is analagous. Prevost committed suicide on account of a mighty struggle in the land he served. The Austrian ambassador seems to have labored under no such perplexity, for his country was at peace with all the world. However he is dead, and it morely goes to show that a high office, with light labors and a big salary, will not always content its incumbent and keep him from the act of the madman. There are some brains for which the allotted lease of human life is too long.

Our dispatches say that Louisiana planters are protesting in congress against the reduction of the duty on sugar. Commissioner Raum of the internal-revenue office recently proposed to make up the protection to them by a bounty of two and a half cents per pound on their sugar, to be paid out of the national treasury. If the government can spare the revenue derived from the sugar duties this course would be vastly cheaper to the people than that insisted on by the Louisiana planters. No one denies that the market price of sugar is made just so much higher by the duty laid upon the article.

The passage of a bill by the house for gradual abolition of the army is intended no doubt as a measure of economy. Brown of Indiana, in urging the passage of the bill, made the point that as things now stand 53 paymasters are required to pay less than 24,000 men. Yet it may be doubted whether the disproportion of officers to men in this department is greater than in other branches of the military service. We have nearly 1000 officers of all ranks to less than 24,000 men, or one to eight; while in the British army the proportion is one officer to about 36 men.

It is estimated that the advance in the price of hops is equivalent to an increase of $1 50 per barrel in the price of beer. But the rate has not been advanced by brewers to meet the increased cost. Efforts in that direction in eastern cities have failed. Retailers of beer will pay no more than the old price. To all assertions that an inferior substitute for hops is being used by the brewers the latter return a positive denial, and offer to convince any doubter who will take the trouble to investigate the matter.

In the matter of application for regulation of the Indiana Senate a bill is presented for polygamy among them a fine of $20 and thirty days at hard labor, etc. The Salt Lake Tribune says this is just the regulation that is wanted for the Mormons. The test applied in Utah would just about squelch polygamy. Take the old chaps would stand the fire. They would make the women earn that. But the thirty days at hard labor would be a clincher.

The discovery has been made that there are millions in cotton seed. Not less than 3,000,000 tons of the seed are produced annually and the product of each ton are worth $24 Cotton seed oil is worth 45 cents a gallon, but the most valuable product of the seed is oil cake, which is rapidly growing in favor as a food for cattle. Large part of the seed is still wasted, but preparations are making to utilize it more and more.

In the course of a column devoted to profound observations on American politics the London Saturday Review says: "The election of General Butler as governor of New York, is perhaps the heaviest blow which has been struck at the republican party. He was probably supported by the Irish immigrants, whose numbers have of late largely increased in Boston and in the other towns of Massachusetts."

Congress is doing its duty in providing for the "events that may happen" in case of the removal, resignation or death of the president or his inability to act, when there is no vice president to succeed him. The bill passed by the senate marks out a line of succession with sufficient explanatory and precautionary

The first newspaper published west of Cincinnati was the Vincennes Sun in 1806. The next was the Missouri Gazette, of St. Louis, in 1808, which was followed by the Louisiana Gazette in 1809. The first paper in Illinois was published at Kaskaskia in 1814.

Stretching the Fourteenth Amendment.

New York Times.

We could have no use at that moment for the Chinese, but we did not want to establish a precedent by which we should be compelled to admit them hereafter, if the necessity arose. It was therefore decided to refer the matter to the Supreme Court of the United States, and a test case was made up. Ah Sing, a Chinaman, was arrested for violating the law, and was fined $50 and costs. He refused to pay the fine, and was committed to the county jail. His counsel then applied to Judge Sawyer, of the United States Circuit Court, for a writ of habeas corpus, which was granted, and the case was brought before him. Judge Sawyer decided that the law was unconstitutional, and discharged the prisoner. The case was then carried to the Supreme Court of the United States, where the decision was affirmed. The ground taken by the court was that the fourteenth amendment to the constitution, which declares that no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, or deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws, was intended to protect the negro race in their newly acquired rights as citizens, and that it was not intended to apply to the Chinese race, which was not then in contemplation.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Down in Connecticut a few days ago a man was about to buy a ticket for New York, when a friend who was present asked him if he had his pocket-book with him. He replied that he had, and was about to produce it, when the friend stopped him, saying that he would buy the ticket and he could pay him when they got to New York. The friend then purchased a ticket for himself and one for his companion, and they went on board the train. When the conductor came around for tickets the friend handed him two tickets, and the conductor punched them and handed them back. The friend then handed one of the tickets to his companion, and the latter looked at it and found that it was a ticket for Springfield, Mass., instead of New York. He then asked his friend why he had given him a ticket for Springfield instead of New York, and the friend replied that he had saved him $3 by the operation. There will be no more ride.

GERMAN FLOODS.

The Overflow of the Rhine Inundates many Towns—Loss of Property and Life.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—By New Year's the Danube had overflowed the right bank, flooding the railway and stations and driving all into the upper stories and roofs. The Danube Navigation company had boats and seamen ready and detachments of pontoniers on duty. In Prater the water had become unmanageable over the 11 acres. In the last the water and the ice became dangerous. In some houses dwelling among the horses and cattle and were saved by the boats, have and particulars received from Hungary. There is no such any abatement of the flood. The water is subsiding, and reports from the Lower Danube and Theiss valleys are more favorable. Provisions are scarce and prices high.

Buda-Pesth is in a state of panic. The inhabitants, men, women and children, are fleeing from the city—latter, being entirely unprovided, in many cases saved their lives with difficulty, and lost their property. The Danube is at its highest point ever known. The damage to property is enormous. Over 1,000 houses have been destroyed and 10,000 people rendered homeless. Many villages are destroyed and 2,000 houses in a single district. Between Warasdin and Wesmin, in a space 3 miles in length and 2 in breadth, 1,500 houses are destroyed and 10,000 people rendered homeless. Many villages are entirely destroyed and the inhabitants have fled to the heights to save their lives. At Mannheim nothing is visible from the observatory but a sea. Nearly a thousand houses are flooded. The lowlands between Worms and Mannheim are in a state of wreck. Hundreds of cattle were lost at Heidelberg. Both lines of railway are destroyed. The water has risen to the railway in the lower part of the town. Everywhere refugees, and public buildings are opened to shelter the sufferers. The authorities are supplying food from Worms to Rudesheim and Lampertsheim.

At Bingen where the Rhine bursts through the dams and swept away houses and herds. All the streets of Cologne are under water, and the suburbs form an extensive lake and 30,000 people are homeless. From the warehouses goods are being moved away. The police and fire brigade are laying trestle walks to facilitate the escape of residents. White boats, laden with household effects, assist in the work of conveying merchants to their offices, into which they creep through the windows.

Near Cologne the little towns of Mulheimer, Virden and Warrington are entirely under water. In Friedrichsfeld houses have fallen and furniture floats about. Householders in many cases are prisoners in their half submerged dwellings and are threatened with famine.

PESTH, Jan. 9.—The floods in Hungary are increasing. The town of Raab on the Danube is submerged and it is reported many persons were drowned.

Relief From all Quarters.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—An organization is perfecting here for the relief of the sufferers by the Rhine overflow.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 9. The German relief fund amounts to $1600.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Oswald Ottendorfer, proprietor of the Staats Zeitung, and other well known citizens, attended the meeting to-day by the Turn Verein, to devise means of relieving the distress caused by the floods in Germany. It was resolved to send aid to the sufferers by the overflow of the Rhine and its tributaries only unless news was received of suffering in other directions.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—A meeting was held to-day to decide upon aid for the German sufferers by the flood. A mass meeting will be called for Wednesday night.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 9.—Adolph Moses, a lawyer of this city, received a cablegram from Frankfort, Germany, soliciting aid for the sufferers by the recent floods. A committee was appointed to solicit funds.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—A collection will shortly be started throughout the empire in aid of the sufferers in the flooded districts. The Prussian government has already granted $25,000 for their relief, and the government of Hesse has given the same. Amounts of subscriptions in Prussia have reached £175,000. Large sums are arriving from England and America.

The Rhine and Main Receding.

WIESBADEN, Jan. 9.—The Rhine is now five feet below the highest point, which was Friday. The Main has fallen 8 feet at Frankfort. As the water retires the ravages become terribly apparent. Many districts will probably never regain their former prosperity.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

Hongkong and Shanghai—Robbery in High Quarters—Rice Crop, Etc.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—The steamship Arabia has arrived from China, bringing dates, Hongkong and Shanghai, to Dec. 12th.

The viceroy of Nanking continues in a critical state and is not expected to recover.

Admiral Tryon and Diplomatic Agent Mr. Rich Tsung, who conducted Chinese affairs in Corea during the recent troubles, have been sent to represent the Peking government at the court of Annam and give advice and assistance in the anticipated difficulty between Tonquin and the French.

The rice harvest in Annam is unusually poor. A famine is threatened.

A sub-official in the board of revenue has revealed alleged corruption in the highest quarters. Prince Kung is accused of taking bribes, 40,000 taels in one transaction.

Arrangements are in progress for recalibrating the eastern route of the French Messageries Maritimes company so as to run from Saigon to Manila and Yokohama, omitting perhaps Hongkong. The colonial council of French Cochin China will give 250,000 francs annual subsidy if the proposed line is carried out.

There is difficulty at Swatow between the Chinese and German officials over a valuable plot of land claimed by private German firm, Dircks & Co., and also by the Chinese government. The latter's agents having erected the usual wooden pillars, signifying ownership by the state. These pillars were thrown away by a boy of sailors from the German ship of war Elizabeth, under orders of the naval and consular officials. The Chinese still refuse to recognize the German claim, which is maintained by a strong guard of marines.

The Hong Kong chamber of commerce has received, from Lord Granville, a copy of the Anglo-Corean treaty, with a request for an opinion of that body as to the documents in question.

Corean agents at Tientsin have been busily engaged with Viceroy Li Chung Chan, drawing up regulations for diplomatic and commercial intercourse. These are not yet published, but principally refer to the fisheries on the Corean coast. The destruction of the ancient palisade barrier extending across the frontier of the two countries, the building of the so-called neutral ground, forty miles wide, hitherto impassable by subjects of either nation; the establishment of a line of Chinese steamers and a Chinese bank, and to the management of customs revenues by foreigners from the Chinese service.

Several ports will be fully open to foreign trade by next spring, and a large influx of new comers is expected. The French consul to China is reported to have had stormy interviews with Li Hung Chang at Tientsin, on the subject of admitting missionaries into Corea.

Capital punishments on the individuals concerned in the assassination of the Japanese are daily inflicted at Taonio, and numerous suspected parties, some of good rank, are degraded or exiled.

The Mikado's birthday was celebrated with great festivity in the capital of Corea, native dignitaries cordially co-operating.

The Japanese troops were reviewed by the king, at his own suggestion.

YOKOHAMA, Dec. 22.—Sums aggregating half a million dollars are to be devoted to building city residences for members of the imperial family.

After a prolonged consideration, the government has decided to slightly increase the rates of domestic postage.

Away Across the Mississippi Is Held a Convincing Conversation.

"Tell you, sir, that they use one of the most remarkable combinations ever produced, and my experience of that sort of thing has been wide enough to entitle my judgment to some respect."

"Oh, I don't know," responded the first speaker's friend, with a little yawn, as though he didn't take much interest in the subject, "I have never been able to see much difference in those things. They are all pretty nearly the same size, and made of about the same stuff."

The talk, of which the foregoing is a fragment, took place in Gallatin, Missouri, not long ago, in the store office of Dr. M. P. Flowers, one of the leading physicians of the State, who followed up the vein in which he had interposed it substantially in these words:

"Somehow, that is the character of a boy, or rather of a man who either doesn't know or doesn't care what he says. Those things, as you call them, are just as different as the moon is from green cheese. Now, Hermonia, Iodoid and Sozodont are very good in their cases for the relief of 'a' or inflammation. But in medical practice they are simply the tools in the hands of the doctor, to be used or thrown out of reach as he may see fit."

"Well, my dear Doctor, against the record of the North Pole, what would you have to show? Why, absolutely nothing, and nothing to record, but what is against you, don't suppose anything."

"Yes I can, indeed, in the Doctor!" throwing the table with his fist. "I can show a PLAIN STRAIGHT LINE through PLEASURE. I have cured thousands of patients and I have tried it myself for months. I had pneumonia, and in its severest form. I had tried all the three so-called remedies above. They simply gave me a respite—a temporary relief—and I was on the point of giving up in despair, when, by accident, for instance, in a moment of Napoleonic Waterloo, Sandusco, I stumbled accidentally on the Kidney-Wort."

"I give it up, Doctor, and in case of need I'll buy Hostetter's," said the traveler, pleasantly.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Tuesday, Jan. 9, 1883.

A beautiful sunny day shone in Gotham a thousand miles to the west but there was no gladness. Prices were not varied on the bourse of a solemn kind. The wheat bulls were generally all they said, and the shorts were generally all they said not, and the shorts were generally all they said not, but all were perhaps opposed the rise as to [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
